Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Saturday 05 Jun 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Showers in northwest UK today but mostly fine elsewhere.

Today:
Drizzle giving way to scattered heavier showers, for Northern Ireland and parts of Scotland. Any light rain in East Anglia clearing, then many areas seeing warm sunny spells and light winds. The far west and southwest cloudier, rain possible later.

Tonight:
Southern areas mild and often cloudy, with some rain in places, perhaps heavy in the southwest but probably dry in some southeastern parts. Northern UK cooler, clearer and mostly dry.

Sunday:
Cooler, wetter conditions may affect parts of southwest and central England and south Wales, with some heavy showers later. Elsewhere some warm sunshine, although possible showers elsewhere in the south.

Outlook for Monday to Wednesday:
Plenty of fine, warm weather with light winds. However, parts of England in particular at risk of heavy showers Monday. Increasing cloud from the northwest from Tuesday with sporadic rain.
